LIONS GIVE CUP FOR FOOTBALL PROWESS OF JEFFERSON TEAM

In appreciation of the winning football aggregation representing Jefferson Union high school this year, the Daly City Lions Club will present a cup emblematic of the championship of B division, Northern section.

The victory, on October 21, over the South San Francisco high school team sent stock in athletics at the local school booming, coming as it did after fruitless years since the opening of Jefferson High.

A summary of the games played this season by the Jefferson football team proves that their "big game" win was no fluke, as they boast of victories over the 130's of Polytechnic and Mission high schools of San Francisco and of Potter, ending with a scoreless tie with the first team of the Galileo high school.

This cup to be donated by the members of the Lions club to the football team will, no doubt, be a big boost to athletics generally at the local high school, in giving them something to show beside hard work, assorted bumps and bruises, for the winning spirit.

The date of presentation of the cup has not been set, but will be staged at a student body meeting at an early date, it is expected.

SPONSORS COSTUME HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Last Monday evening a very pretty costume Hallowe'en party was given by Bonnie Jean Kremen at the home of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Kremer, of 498 Frankford street, in Crocker Terrace.

A large pumpkin face, lit up, greeted the guests on the front porch and started the fun for the evening. The parlor and dining rooms were prettily decorated with black and orange crepe paper, and witches, goblins and black cats took possession of the house. Lots of fun was had in trying to find out "who was who."

After playing games and much merrymaking, very tempting refreshments were served by Mrs. Kremer, on a table decorated with red apples, bon bons, popcorn balls and everything that was suitable for Hallowe'en.

Bonnie Jean's guests were Delphine Gregoire, Carmela Nardie, Beatrice Cuneo, Gladys Eldrup, Myrtle Augustien, Milfred Mansfelt, Pearl Smith, Mary Nardie, Clytie Clousky, Marian Mansfelt, Doris Dalzell, Bernice Nolan, Grace Templin, Lorraine Gregoire, Fred Bostock, Wilfred Franklin, Frank Gordon, Wayne Swanson, Francis Denning, William Slevin, Frank De Langton, James Martin, and Russell Fieber.

GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY ON FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

Councilman A. J. Bodien and wife were guests of honor Saturday evening, October 29, at a big surprise dinner given at their home by a host of friends, in honor of their fifteenth anniversary. After justice had been done to a big turkey spread, a very enjoyable evening was spent in playing cards. Hallowe'en colors were used for decorations. At the weird hour of midnight, Mr. and Mrs. Bodien were visited by Mother Witch, when she presented them with many beautiful gifts in the line of crystal.

PLAN OBSERVANCE OF EDUCATION WEEK

Three hundred odd Posts of the California Department of the American Legion will observe American Education Week, beginning November 7, according to State Commander Phil Dodson.

In co-operation with local civic, fraternal and church organizations, the World war veterans have outlined an extensive program for the week of November 7 to 13, following the suggestions of the national officers of the American Legion, the National Education Association and the local school authorities.

"To acquaint the public with the work of the schools and their needs is the purpose of American Education Week," State Commander Dodson declares.

The following is the schedule for the week: Monday, "Health Day"; Tuesday, "Home and School Day"; Wednesday, "Know Your School Day"; Thursday, "School Opportunity Day"; Friday, "Armistice Day"; Saturday, "Community Day"; Sunday, "For God and Country Day".

Addresses will be made in the schools on the different days, and luncheon clubs in the various California cities have been asked to join with appropriate programs, featuring talks by Legion and school heads.

RUNAWAY YOUTHS RETURNED TO HOMES

Three boys, Preston Dickelle, David Kerwin and Bernard Marcus, all of San Francisco, were found at Rockaway Beach on Tuesday by Herbert Bazinett, who conducts a cafe there, and turned over to Constable S. A. Landini. The boys, all 11 years of age, were on their way to Los Angeles, where they thought they could enter the movies. They were very hungry when found by Bazinett, and were thankful for the fine feed he gave them before being turned over to Constable Landini and taken back to their comfortable homes.

SCHOOL BURGLAR BEHIND THE BARS

The mysterious burglar who broke into the Jefferson high and Vista Grande school has been caught and is now in jail. Several schools in San Francisco were also entered. Nothing was taken at the Vista Grande school, but about $100 worth of things were stolen from the high school. The sewing room was entered, and a large bunch of keys that the burglar had taken was found in his room. The 17-year-old young man apprehended gave his name as William Glassner, and lives in the Hayes apartment, San Francisco, having come from Minnesota two months ago.

CELEBRATES FIRST BIRTHDAY

Little Miss Marie Reardon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Reardon, of 876 Hanover street, celebrated her first birthday last Sunday with a Hallowe'en party. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion in black and orange crepe paper. It was an all day party, the guests staying for the evening. The table was very much admired by the little guests, and much to their surprise the big pumpkin face in the center of the table contained pretty little horns, dolls and other toys, which were discovered when the youngsters pulled the little ribbons at each of their places. The Hallowe'en birthday cake with its one little candle was also very attractive. The little hostesses guests were Florence Rancatore, Margaret Meader, Claire Filiatrault, Corrinne Parmisano, Evelyn Rancatore, Frank Rancatore, Georgia Cates, Tom Rancatore, Geraldine Parmisano, Stanley Parmisano, Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnson in black and orange crepe paper and the table decorations were also suggestive of Hallowe'en. Mrs. Roberts, who made her home in New Orelans prior to coming to Daly City, treated her guests to a real old Southern dinner. Those who came to wish the hostess a happy birthday were Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Johnson and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. F. Carpenter and son Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Kell and family, of Oakland, Mrs. Stang, Mrs. S. Bergstein, William Roberts.

MASONIC MEMBERS ENJOY BANQUET ON PAST MASTERS NIGHT

Tuesday night, October 25, was Past Masters' night at Crocker Lodge No. 454, F. & A. M., the degreee work being conferred by the Past Masters in a manner that was most gratifying to the members and visitors present.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies a banquet was held in honor of William Haerdter, popularly known as "Bill," of the Relish Bakery.

Over two hundred were seated at the banquet tables, and enjoyed one of the best meals ever served in the Masonic Hall. The tables and banquet room were pleasingly decorated in Hallowe'en colors, the committe that had charge of the decorations proving that the knew how.

Worshipful Master James Syme, in his usual happy manner, acted as toastmaster. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Charles H. Gatchell, who delivered a most interesting address which was thoroughly enjoyed.

The musical features included songs by seven singers from the Fruindshaff Liederkranz, songs by Past Master Kenneth MacLean and Dave Wills.

During the evening "Bill' was presented a beatuiful Masonic ring, a gift from the girls who are employed in the Relish, and two pins, one from the salesmen he deals with, and one from Mr. Meyers, the soda man.

Earlier on the same evening, Mr. Haerdter treated all of his employees to a duck dinner, which was greatly enjoyed.

BURGLAR SUSPECT ARRESTED IN SOUTH

Wanted by Sheriff James J. McGrath for the robbery of a San Francisco taxicab driver in Colma on July 26 of this year, Roy McClean, alias Jimmy Carroll, is being held in San Luis Obispo, awaiting trial on a burglary charge, it has been learned. McClean was arrested in the Southern California city several days ago.

The suspect, together with another man, hired Daniel Walker, of 125 Precita avenue, San Francisco, to drive them to Hurley's cafe, at Colma. When they reached a deserted part of the road, the highwaymen held up Walker at the point of a gun and after binding him, took $146 and his automobile, abandoning him in a deserted house.

LOCAL BOY SCOUTS WILL TAKE PART IN ARMISTICE PROGRAM

The Boy Scouts of Daly City are going at their work these days with an enthusiasm that is most commendable.

A Thanksgiving turkey whist will be given by the Boy Scout Troop No. 103, of Daly City. A committee of four boys have been appointed to set the date and make other necessary arrangements for the whist.

The Methodist church of Daly City asked the troop to give an Armistice Day program, and the boys gladly accepted the invitation. The program will take place next Sunday evening at 9 o'clock. The "Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag," the "Scout Oath," and the "Scout Laws" will be recited by the Scouts.

The subject of patrol projects was discussed recently and Albert Ennis, patrol leader of the Eagle patrol, stated that his patrol had decided on Nature Study as their subject.

Cleon Abbott, assistant scoutmaster, was appointed publicity manager of the troop, as the troop needed one for various occasions, such as whist parties and plays to be held in the future.

A council committee was formed in the troop. This committte discusses troop problems and other affairs pertaining to the troop. This committee is composed of all the senior officers, namely, Mr. V. Ruff, scoutmaster, Cleon Abbott, assistant scoutmaster, Albert Ennis, patrol leader of the Eagles, Thurston Bentley, patrol leader of the Beaver patrol, Arthur Crocker, assistant patrol leader of the Beavers, and George Brenner, troop scribe.

ARMISTICE DAY TO BE CELEBRATED SUNDAY

One of the finest and most interesting services of the year will be the feature Sunday evening at the Daly City Methodist church.

We are to celebrate Armistice Day, and have invited as our special guests the Boy Scouts of Daly City, and also extend a special invitation to the ex-service men to enjoy the service with us. Mrs. Olson will sing for us a special solo that will be in keeping with the occasion, "Lest We Forget." The pastor will preach on the subject, "Armistice Day, Yesterday and Today."

The Sunday morning service should appeal to all. The subject for the preaching hour will be, "What is Sacrifice?"

We had the largest Sunday school last Sunday morning that we have ever had, and this Sunday we expect to break all records. Let us go "over the top" on Armistice Sunday and break all previous records.

Last Sunday evening will be long remembered by many of the Epworth League group as the red letter day of their lives. Jim McGiffine brought us a real message at the League hour, and the gospel team of the conference warmed our hearts at the evening service, for as we listened to them testify to their allegiance to Christ and what He had done for them, we too could say did not our hearts burn within us as He walked and talked with us.

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Minister.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Mrs. C. J. Pettigrew, of 47 Hillcrest Drive, was hostess at a Hallowe'en party last Monday evening. The decorations were very effective. The table was covered with an orange organdie Hallowe'en cloth and a huge pumpkin, carved by Mrs. Pettigrew, was placed in the center of the table and was illuminated by a revolving drop light which gave the table and surroundings a very pretty effect. The evening was spent in dancing and the very amusing game of "Coo-Coo," which was purchased from Mrs. Lombard of Ye Novelty Shoppe. A very delightful luncheon was served the guests. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. David Johnstone, David Johnstone, Jr., Miss Edna Rhelan, Miss Mary Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bachigalupi, Miss Mary Phelan, Mr. Harvey Phelan, Mr. Tony Kentra and Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Pettigrew.

Celebrates Eleventh Birthday

Master Alexander McNair was the guest of honor at a birthday party given in honor of his eleventh birthday, last Saturday from 5 to 8 o'clock, at the home of his mother, Mrs. M. McNair, of 425 Wellington avenue. The boys had a wonderful time diving for apples, and also did justice to the dainty refreshments served by Mrs. McNair. Those at the party were Leonard McKee, Grover Devanie, Donald Devanie, Frank De Langton, Junior Fitchie, Charles Augustien, Bruce McNair and Gordon McNair.

SEEK COLLECTION OF 57-YEAR OLD TAXES

Property owners throughout San Mateo county are learning, upon the receipt of bills from the office of the county auditor, that fifty-seven year old taxes must now be paid or the property may be sold at public auction, according to a story appearing in the San Mateo Times.

Charles E. Skidmore, tax expert, employed by the supervisors of San Mateo county to clear up unpaid taxes, some dating as far back as 1861, has just completed the first section of his work along the coastside.

Half Moon Bay property owners, particularly in a subdivision known as Arleta Park, Half Moon Bay, were shocked to receive tax bills for $250, $200 and as low as 30 cents.

Investigation into the reason for the tax bills elicited this information: As an example the Arleta subdivision was originally a great ranch with hundreds of acres back in 1872. Taxes were levied, but collection methods at that early date were loose and so in most cases they were never paid. In 1904 the property was cut up into the present subdivision and sold in lots. Research by Skidmore developed the unpaid taxes and he has subsequently prorated it among the owners of the lots and sent them the bills. If the taxes are not paid as prorated, the property will be sold at auction. There are 82 acres in this particular subdivision.

Another piece of property in the county that presents an interesting example is that of James L. Flood at Menlo Park, comprising 1,200 acres. The Flood property is part of a great old ranch on which taxes levied in 1861 were never paid. The Floods will consequently receive a bill for taxes on their quota of the property owned by them now. Their bill will be approximately $5,200, according to a rough estimate made by the workers.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church gave Mrs. Stanley Williams, of Santa Cruz avenue, a surprise on Tuesday night at her home, in honor of her birthday. A very pleasant evening was spent, with music and games, and Mr. Fisher presented Mrs. Williams a beautiful pocketbook, the gift of the ladies, in recognition of her faithful services and help in the church. Afterwards refreshments were served and thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Those present were Rev. E. L. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Harry McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Williams, Mr. and Mrs. James Hay, Mr. and Mrs. Daraugh, Mr. and Mrs. Cashion and twins, Mr. and Mrs. Ross, Mrs. J. R. Bennett, Mrs. Gainsburgh, Mrs. Meeth, Mr. Melvin Williams, Mr. William R. Jones, Mr. Ernest Hammer.

CHARITY

Sermon delivered by Father James Donohoe at St. Maximus church last Sunday:

Before the coming of Christ, men knew little of the virtue of "Charity." The poor were oppressed and afflicted to a state lower than servitude. In the struggle, the groveling, the grasping for gold and glory, men maddened by the waste and seamy side of life, thought only of themselves. The pagan was inhuman to his fellowmen, to women and chlidren particularly.

The record of civilization's slow progress was written in the blood of little children. They had no rights before the dawn of Christianity. They were considered a necessary evil. The life of a child was not protected by any law or public opinion of any nature. In Rome they were exposed. In the interior of China it is estimated that 40 per cent of the girl babies were drowned. Inside the brass statue of Moloch, a roaring fire was built and in the seething arms of the savage god women flung their screaming children. Even in educated and cultured Greece, a child's life was valueless and the learned Socrates could find nothing to condemn against child murder.

It was Chrisitanity that really discovered the child. All childhood was ennobled by the birth of Christ in the manger. Later He pleaded, "Suffer little children to come to Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

We like to think of Christ pleading with those modest mothers to allow their children to come to Him, and then imagine that little wave of humanity rushing into His open arms to have Him fondle them. In that group were some with ragged and soiled clothes, and some who left the print of their little hands upon His clean garments, but Christ did not mind. Such was His treatment of saint and sinner alike.

He was the God of little children particularly. He delighted to see the

NARROW UNDERPASS WILL NOT SLOW UP BOTTLENECK TRAFFIC

As the work of breaking the "bottleneck" south of Colma nears completion, there has been raised the question as to whether or not there will be a narrow portion of the highway which will still be the cause of slowing up traffic, and undo all the good done in the widening of the road at an expense of approximately $700,000.

This narrow portion of the highway, referred to as the "needle-eye," is the underpass beneath the Southern Pacific bridge between Colma and the cemeteries.

An explanation of this condition has been made by A. W. McCurdy, of the state division of engineers of the highway commission.

"I do not think that any unnecessary alarm need be felt over this condition," says McCurdy. "It is true," he continued, "that there is a converging at this point. The highway engineers know of this and have planned it. There will be room for three and four cars to pass, and traffic will not be slowed down or congested.

"There will be a 66-foot width beneath this bridge, with a pier in the middle. Car tracks will be on each side of the pier, and the road proper outside of the car tracks. The tracks will be so constructed that traffic over them by automobiles will be easy.

"At the present time the Southern Pacific is planning to make changes at this bridge to allow a span across the entire road. This will not take place for some time, but the time will come when there will be a complete span there and the road will be 120 feet wide beneath the bridge. The railroad right now is planning changes at the bridge to allow for sidewalk and pedestrian traffic.

"I do not think that anybody should be alarmed that the so-called "needle" will slow traffic and undo all of the work done.

"There are two other bottle-neck problems nearby that will slow traffic far more than this bridge coverage point. These places are at the intersection of the Junipero Serra highway and the place where the road enters Daly City. There is a stream of cross-wise traffic at these points that slows up everything.

"Beneath the bridge, traffic will be able to move along swiftly, and without slowing down. The street car phase, in the opinion of the engineers, will not be a handicap."

C. E. MEMBERS HOLD HALLOWE'EN SOCIAL

Theme for next Sabbath evening at Grace Presbyterian church will be, "Who Ate the Sour Grapes? What effect has it had, and who is suffering from it now?" Mrs. Roof and Mrs. DeVol are to furnish special music for this service.

Despite the great downfall of rain last Sabbath, the attendance at Sunday school was way up, and the C. E. had more than usual, while the evening service was one of the best for some time.

The C. E. social held on Hallowe'en was a real get-together meeting, between seventy-five and eighty being present. All enjoyed the games, and at the close a splendid luncheon of sandwiches, cake and coffee was served.

The ladies of the Guild gave a most excellent luncheon on Wednesday, and words cannot express the appreciation which should be given those who labor so faithfully to support the work.

The cry of our hearts is expressed in that old stanza of days gone by:

Oh, for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road,
That leads me to the Lamb.

This church desires to enter into partnership with all Christians to help build better society, better fellowship and better homes for the tract. If you have a desire to work, come and help; but if you would find fault, we can do that ourselves.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Mrs. Martin Christen was hostess at a surprise miscellaneous shower given at her home, 374 Templeton avenue, last Friday evening, by the drill team of the Native Daughters, in honor of Miss Louise Gregoire, a bride-elect. The evening was spent in singing and dancing, after which Miss Gregoire was the recipient of many lovely gifts. The guests included Caroline Spani, Dolores Barron, Alice Mathias, Elsie Fahy, Marge Varni, Tessie O'Connor, Marge O'Connor, Christine Hume, Florence Mc Kendrick, Louise Segali and Freda Christen.

PROTECTION OF LEGAL RIGHTS OF MOTORIST

Ownership and operation of an automobile carries with it newer and greater responsibility and obligations each year. Guiding the motorist along his route under the rules of the road and protecting his legal rights has become a major function of the California State Automobile Association, according to the annual report of the legal department of the motorists' organization, just made public.

Motorists generally seek to stay within the law and keep posted on the law's requirements, the report points out, but unintentional infractions or accidents may happen even to the most careful. To smooth the path of the motorist who inadvertently runs afoul of the law and to assist him and advise him as to his legal rights in all matters affecting the ownership and operation of his car is the function of the Association legal department. This Association department is an authoritative source on motor vehicle legislation and traffic regulations and is responsible for the California Vehicle Act and much of the legislation making for greater safety on street and highway and for sane and reasonable regulation.

"A general tendency on the part of Association motorists to keep posted on the state law and local traffic regulations was noted during the past year," said George E. Sanford, general attorney for the motorists organization. "With important new changes effective this year in the state law and many cities changing their traffic rules to bring them up to modern standards, the demand for services of the legal department has brought one of our busiest years.

"In drafting of the uniform traffic ordinance and working for its adoption by California cities, in drafting of amendments to the California Vehicle Act and disseminating digests of these changes in the law, the department has sought to aid in improving motoring conditions and at the same time secure standardization and simplification of motor vehicle law while writing reasonableness and safety into the codes.

"A staff of thirty attorneys, investigators and clerks is engaged in advising Association motorists of their rights and standing before the law up to the period of trial. During the year, the fourteen attorneys of this department handled 15,401 civil and misdemeanor arrest cases, an increase of 3,709 over the previous year, and collected $48,722.48 for members in various civil cases without recourse to suit and without charge."

NINETEEN THOUSAND DEER SLAUGHTERED IN CALIFORNIA

At least 19,000 deer have been killed in California during the present season, and the hunters who have killed the most deer have done so in the counties in which they live.

These facts, with many more interesting and very unique ones, are available as a result of the operation of the new deer tag law by the Fish and Game Division of the Department of National resources, B. D. M. Greene, executive officer of the division, announces.

In practically every county the records indicate that the local hunter's knowledge of the section resulted in their getting the best bags. Mendocino county holds the record for the number of deer killed, with 1,406, but the county is far from complete, as it will take at least two weeks after the close of the season to gather in all of the tags and compile the information.

San Francisco, Sacramento and Imperial counties produced no deer, while but two were killed in Kings county. Despite the great area taken up by numerous cities, including Los Angeles, Pasadena, Long Beach, Glendale and the Santa Monica bay cities, Los Angels county hunters knocked over 310 deer. Over 1,000 were killed in Siskiyou, the extreme northern county, while Humboldt and Lake will furnish a lot of deer when the statistics are completed. Good hunting was also found in Trinity county, but the record shows that more hunters from Humboldt county were able to kill deer in this section than the home hunters.

It's got so that any woman who makes any pretentions to being an outdoor person's feels morally obliged to swim the English Channel and fly across the Atlantic.

Look pleasant if you don't feel so. Keep your temper; no one else has any use for it.

When the Boys Got the Joyful News

Nine years ago, November 11, 1918, much of the civilized world forgot nearly every other emotion except an unbounded joy at the news that an armistice had been declared in the World war. Photograph shows a group of men of Company M, Sixth infantry regiment, Fifth division, stationed near Remoiville, France, upon receipt of the news.

NOW THAT NINE YEARS ARE GONE

Armistice Day Is Largely a Time of Personal Remembrance.

Nine years ago the armies of the allies and of Germany were engaged in the last battles of the World war. The armistice called on November 11, 1918, has as yet been only an armistice—a stacking of arms—with peace on earth existing precariously at times and in various localities.

By custom Armistice day has become a day of remembrance. We stand for two minutes silent, to reflect on those years. In all the confusion, distress and poverty, left as its aftermath, the purposes for which, presumably, the war was waged have been pushed aside by more immediate pressing problems of national interests caused by the war.

There have been riddles of economics, politics and national and personal ambitions, to add to the confusion. Combined, these clashing forces have rendered impossible the fulfillment of our war aims and much of the time have so obscured them that we forget what they were, or that we ever had any.

Desire to Forget War.

Americans have had another obstacle to a clear understanding of the war. The battlefields are in Europe, inaccessible to us, except for tourists, but a constant reminder on the European's doorstep. Save for families and friends directly interested we see little trace of the effect of the war upon our men. We have been prosperous. Our skins were hardly scratched by the war. And we recovered quickly—so quckly that the war seems like a bad dream we wish to forget as soon as we may.

The shouting and tumult have died. Armistice day has become a time of personal remembrance, dedicated to the individual. We lay our offering of respect at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in an effort to demonstrate our admiration for the endurance, courage and determination of common men. We do not send up paeans for our glorious victory, for we are sure neither of the glory nor the victory. Rejoicing at the end of a dreadful nightmare was the general emotion at the close of hostilities and it has remained the common sentiment.

Now the world is recovering slowly from its shell shock and we begin to see the war in perspective as the thing of horror it was. After the armistice it was safe to assume that those soldiers who had had most active service, talked least of their experiences. There was nothing they could say, except to tell the things they were trying to forget. Memory of war to them was mental anguish.

Memories of Horror.

The sergeant of infantry who remarked, "I never thought, back in Boston, that I could ever bayonet a man, but then I had never led a platoon against a machine gun nest and had half of them knocked off," does not like to recall the face of the German machine gunner as the bayonet pasesd through his throat. All soldiers who had any considerable amount of combatant service have similar memories. They might be the scream of a mule on a shell-wracked road; the ludicrous tumbling of a man blown in the air by a high explosive shell; the face of a stricken comrade gradually turning black from a hemorrhage; the feeble struggles of a mortally wounded soldier trying in vain to get on his feet, or the hammering of the barrage in his head, or aching fatigue.

Whatever the memories, they were of incidents the soldier would like to forget. Multitudes of them were in the minds of soldiers when the armistice was called. That was why, when they climbed out of the slimy mud of shell holes and stood erect on November 11, 1918, there was nothing in their hearts but a boundless gladness that at last the infernal thing was over.

Perspective Now Possible.

With such thoughts fresh in his mind is it surprising the veteran soldier did not like to discuss the war with folk who spoke of going over the top as of a game? But nine years have gone by and slowly tongues that were bound have loosened. War is not all horror. Little by little the amusing incidents began to be told. the man who went to sleep while putting up barbed wire in No Man's land and had to be hunted for; the blithesome details of the first and second A. W. O. L.; evenings in Grandmere's kitchen; the squad sent out to suppress a machine gun that found itself in a patch of ripe blackberries, and stayed there.

Time blurs the sharp edges of horror and the mind recalls the lighter things. So with the war. It is only recently it has been talked about again. First the amusing happenings and lately the realities have been told.

Not merely the soldiers, but all the peoples engaged in it never wanted to hear the word again, when the war ended. But the parade of years has placed the great conflict far enough away from us to be seen. Stories of the war appear in magazines, in books, on the stage and in the movies, and everywhere the effort has been to achieve realism. The literature of the war is grisly literature. There is no place in it for the poisonous romanticism that seeks to glorify war as the natural test of national manhood. —Boston Globe.

WHEN PARIS KNEW OF THE ARMISTICE

Typical scene in Paris at the Place de la Concorde, showing the statue of Strasburg in the background and a youngster perched on the muzzle of a captured gun, when the signing of the armistice was announced.

Thought for the Day

Armistice day! Just one minute we give that day . . . to those who gave eternity.

The Eleventh Hour

Armistice day marks the celebration of the closing of the World war —11 minutes after 11 o'clock, morning of eleventh day of eleventh month, 1918.

This Saturday night the popular Kiddie Revue will be presented at the State Theatre, in conjunction with two excellent features, Madge Bellamy in "The Telephone Girl," and Tim McCoy in "The Frontiersman."

Can't Collect Fortune

Possession of the largest face-value promissory note in the world is claimed by M. F. Rossi, antiquarian of San Jose, Calif. Mr. Rossi has a parchment document whose faded inch conveys the date, 1480, and a promise to pay 200 gold florins. The note bears 6 per cent interest. According to Rossi's calculation, he could collect $41,172,200,000,000 on the note if the unfortunate Florentine who signed it was financially sound today. The florin is valued at $200 in American currency.

Cheery News for Mothers

Oakland, Calif.—"I married very young and my children came very close together. During my first expectant period a friend told me of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I have had seven children—all very strong and healthy—and I took the 'Favorite Prescription' each time except the last, and that was my hardest ordeal. I never had any trouble with any of the others, always felt well, was able to do all my own work right up to the last, never suffered very long with any except the last one, and I am sure that would not have been had I taken the 'Prescription' as before."—Mrs. Benita Strohallen, 877 36th St.

Odd Cure for Deafness

Joe Duree of Des Moines, Iowa, completely deaf, dropped 9,000 feet and was partly cured, but his dropping was done in an airplane and it was a treatment prescribed by several doctors. Duree's hearing was destroyed ten years ago, when he contracted influenza while serving in the army. Doctors advised this remedy in the hope that his eardrums would be jolted into sudden activity by a sudden change of atmospheric pressure. Duree plans another swoop to improve his hearing further.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

MANY CARS FAIL TO BEAT TRAINS

More Than 1,000 Autos Flivvered in Dash to Crossings.

More than 1,000 automobiles last year crashed into trains, stated M. O. Lorenz, director, bureau of statistics, of Interstate Commerce commission, when he addressed the sixteenth annual safety congress. He said in part:

Deaths at Crossings.

"One of the reasons for concerning ourselves about the number of persons that die each year in various classes of railway accidents is that effort may be concentrated on the types of accidents that occasion especially large numbers of deaths. One may discover from casual reading of the newspapers that there are frequent deaths at grade crossings; but it is only after statistics have been compiled that one can make the general statement that of the 7,090 persons killed in connection with the operation of steam railways in 1926, 2,388, or 33.7 per cent, were nontrespassers at grade crossings and 2,623, or 37.0 per cent, were classified as trespassers on the right of way; so that, taking these two groups together we may say that 70.67 per cent of the railroad fatalities occur because people, other than passengers or employees on duty, are on your right of way at the wrong time.

Many Dangerous Crossings.

"There were, at the close of 1926, 27,847 protected and 206,433 unprotected highway grade crossings with steam railroads. It seems hopeless to make them all fool proof, but doubtless there are thousands of dangerous crossings which would be eliminated or more adequately protected next year if the funds were available. Here is a magnificent enterprise which requires the co-operation of the railroads, the newspapers, the school teacher, the legislator, the inventor, and the rest of the public. When we consider that in 1926 over 1,000 accidents, involving 225 deaths and 1,586 injuries, occurred because automobiles were run into the side of a train, we can appreciate the fact that educating drivers to be careful is one of the most important features of the accident problem."

Escaping Oil Reduces Efficiency of Brakes

It is important to prevent the escape of lubricant from the differential housing, because it will accumulate on the brakes and reduce their efficiency. While it is difficult to overcome leakage due to an excessive supply, if reasonable precaution is taken in reassembling the axle, the housing may be made leak-proof.

Leakage is usually caused by worn felt washers in the stuffing box which is intended to form the lubricant seal. It is advisable, therefore, to replace the felt washers and other worn parts of the lubricant seal when differential repairs are being made.

Owing to the importance of this feature the slightest amount of wear evident will justify replacement of the parts. The shaft on which the parts bear should be smooth so that it will not wear the seal away and cause the leak to appear again.

The above covers the principal troubles which may arise in the differential; however, there are others which may also cause excessive wear in the gears and bearings. The most serious of these is a sprung axle housing, which has a tendency to cramp the bearings and distort the gears, causing rapid wear.

Engine Stops Suddenly

When the engine stops suddenly with no preliminary coughing and spitting, the trouble is with the ignition. A wire may be short circuited, a connection loose; the magneto may fail to trip properly, or the spark plug short circuit as soon as it gets hot. If the engine first coughs and spits and then stops, the trouble is in the fuel line, the valves, or the lubrication. If the valves stick, it will show by the lack of compression immediately after stopping.

Muffler Needs Cleaning at Least Once Yearly

If the exhaust gases were to be allowed to escape directly into the atmosphere the sharp explosions rapidly following each other would prove very annoying. The muffler, by breaking up these gases into fine streams and by allowing them to expand and reducing their pressure until they are nearly of the atmospheric pressure, deadens the sound of these explosions without interposing any great amount of back pressure, says Automobile Digest.

It so admirably performs its duties that it is often overlooked when the rest of the car receives an overhauling. The internal mechanism of mufflers varies widely; some consisting only of simple chambers connected together to form a labyrinth for the gas passage, while the more complicated forms have a number of baffle plates or walls pierced with small holes. The most effective and silent type is generally the more susceptible to derangement and will give trouble sooner than the less efficient.

From time to time all mufflers should be cleaned, as a considerable amount of carbon deposits accumulate in them.

Papers Protect Glass While Painting Auto

A spray gun is often used in painting cars, and if the paint comes in contact with the glass, it means a few hours' additional work to clean it. This trouble can be prevented by the use of old newspapers and adhesive or friction tape. The sheets of paper are held against the glass and the tape is used as a binding that fits closely along the edges of the glass, leaving none of it exposed. When the fenders are to be painted in a color differing from that of the body, the same plan may be used to prevent the paint from getting on the parts that are not to be painted. Sheets of tin, about 8 by 10 inches in dimensions, are inserted between the running-board shields and the body. This idea is applicable whether you use a brush or spray, and will save quite a bit of labor when painting window frames of any kind.

Inefficient Brakes Are Cause of Many Mishaps

Analysis of automobile accident statistics has disclosed that a major percentage is attributed to inefficient brakes, and with the steady increasing volume of traffic that passes through city streets and over country highways every day the necessity of having this unit of the car in perfect condition is imperative.

Perfectly working brakes combine safety with enjoyment of motor travel, for power is practically useless unless the driver can properly control the speed of his car. The danger is acute in mountain driving, especially during the vacation season.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

A light winter for California and Nevada, with a water shortage next summer, is forecast by Captain Pete, grizzled leader of the Washoe Indians. Captain Pete says the pinenut crop is very light, fur-bearing animals have not grown the usual heavy pelts, and that bears show no indication of seeking their retreats. The old warrior has long been the medicine chief of his tribe and last year predicted big snows.

Strongly reflecting the influence of the tourist trade in California, this state stood third on the list of new hotel construction for the United States, Canada, England and Panama during the first six months of the current year, according to an analysis of building reports prepared for Henry O. Wheeler, vice-president of the John M. C. Marble Company, Los Angeles financial house.

C. A. Teutschel, manager of the traffic department of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, has received advice from the Southern Pacific Company that it has applied to the railroad commission for authority to reduce rates seven cents per 100 pounds on canned goods in carload lots from Sacramento to Los Angeles harbor points. The same reduced rate now is in effect from San Francisco and bay district points to Los Angeles.

The California Supreme Court will sit in departments this winter for the first time in eight years at San Francisco. This became evident last week with the issuance of an order by Chief Justice William H. Waste, assigning the six associate justices to two departments. Assignment of extra judges to the district court of appeal with the resultant increase in legal business is given by Judge Waste as the reason for the step.

Under the sponsorship of the United States Navy, the University of California College of Mining is starting a research campaign to overcome the corrosive effects of sea water on ship metal, perhaps by surface protection or by alloy of the metal used, according to an announcement made last week by Dean F. H. Probert, who will direct the work.

Motorists plannig trips over Sierra roads were warned last week by the touring bureau of the California State Automobile association to secure latest weather and road reports before starting. Latest reports to the association are that none of the passes have been closed as yet but that rains of the past few days have been particularly heavy in some mountain sections. Motorists are advised to be equipped with skid chains for Sierra trips.

What appears to be a satisfactory substitute for rubber has been discovered by the Bureau of Standards, it was announced last week at Washington, D. C. It is called Guayule rubber and is produced from a shrub grown in Mexico and near Salinas, California. Investigation to find a rubber substitute was ordered by the Commerce Department in an effort to break the British monopoly on plantation rubber. Further tests will be made to determine the commercial possibilities of Guayule rubber.

A fast through highway connecting San Francisco and Los Angeles in a direct route that avoids cities, towns and congested districts is practical, according to information furnished the California Highway Development Association in a report and study completed by the engineering division of the California Highway Commission. The highway, which is being jointly advocated by the California Highway Development Associatiion and the West Side Highway Association, will provide northern and southern California with a two-track road built along lines that will be revolutionary in road design.

California's first experiment in housing convicts in dormitories to relieve crowded conditions at the two State prisons, as suggested recently at a session of the gubernatorial cabinet, will be undertaken at once, Bert B. Meek, director of the State Department of Public Works, announced last week. The first prison dormitory will be constructed at Folsom State penitentiary, Meek said, and money for the work has been made available.

Real estate holding of 13-year-old Jackie Coogan were increased last week to approximately $1,500,000 with the announced purchase of 14 lots for which the youthful film star, through his representatives, paid $100,000 in cash. In addition to the newly acquired lots Jackie holds title to a business block valued in excess of $300,000, two ranches, a public garage and numerous residences.

The senate assembly joint water investigation committee is not ready to indorse any definite plan for statewide water conservation and distribution, nor is it recommending at this time any particular manner of financing the dam and reservoir construction necessary to a co-ordinated water project for California. Assemblyman Bradford C. Crittenden of Tracy, committee chairman, so declared last week at the conclusion of the committee's inspection tour of proposed Sacramento Valley reservoir sites. A San Joaquin Valley and Delta district tour will begin December 5.

Prior to leaving for Washington last week Congressman C. F. Lea received word that the secretary of the interior had confirmed the transfer of Whaler Island, just opposite Cresent City, Del Norte County, to the county of Del Norte. The island, which is about three acres in size, is solid rock and it will be made into a public wharf.

The famous exhibit of Siskiyou County gold valued at $100,000 will be sent to the Pacific Trade and Travel Exposition to be held at San Francisco shortly, by the Lions' Club of Yreka, together with a band of Klamath Indians. This is announced by the Foreign Trade Club.

Some 5,000 barbers who have failed to apply for licenses under the new barbers' license act are scheduled for a close shave at the hands of the State unless they have made application for same, C. E. Rynearson, secretary of the State Board of Barber Examiners, warned last week.

The 1928 planting season will likely see considerable numbers of almond, pear and apricot trees set out in Colusa county. Two or three hundred more acres of pears are in prospect at Mills Orchard at Maxwell, while the Arbuckle districts expect to continue their apricot and almond planting. This is according to T. A. Willis, county horticultural commissioner.

A bean pod three feet, 11 inches in length, produced in the home garden of Mrs. Viola Gibson of Yuba City, Sutter county, is on exhibition in the office of the horticultural commissioner. The variety is the Guinea, Mrs. Gibson says. At two feet long the beans in the pod are regarded as a table delicacy. The pod is not unlike a gourd.

A. W. Farrall of the University Farm, Davis, chairman of the National Committee on Dairy Machinery of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, has just notified the Pacific Slope Dairy Show of the proposed program for the meeting of the western section of the committee to be held in connection with the Dairy Show at Oakland. The meeting will be at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, November 19, that being the last day of the Dairy Show.

Two Santa Clara county communities have joined the ranks of California cities with standardized traffic codes by adoption of the uniform traffic ordinance. They are Palo Alto and Santa Clara. This brings to 43 the number of cities which have made effective the uniform code sponsored by the two motoring organizations of the State, the California Public Safety Conference and other organizations.

With advancement of the uniform traffic law movement as its main objective, the California Municipal Traffic League, the state-wide organization of city officials dealing with traffic problems, will hold its second annual convention in Los Angeles, November 18, 19 and 20, it was announced by Supervisor Charles F. Todd of San Francisco, president of the league.

Contributions of new fruits, flowers and shrubs to the wealth of the world that may exceed the value of the introductions he made during his whole lifetime make up the legacy Luther Burbank left to the world. This belief grows out of a survey now being completed by horticultural experts from the Stark Research Laboratories of the trees and plants which Burbank had stored, without introducing them, on his experiment farms at Santa Rosa and Sebastopol.

Orders to arrest any person traveling past a school house, where children are either entering or leaving, at a speed in excess of fifteen miles an hours, were issued to all state traffic officers last week by Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles. Snook announced that a check of the records revealed that more than twenty school cheildren were either killled or injured by motor vehicles during the first two weeks of school.

Newspapermen from all California will assemble in San Francisco on November 11 and 12 for the annual business meeting of the California Press Association, it was announced last week by the executive committee of the organization. Headquarters during the convention will be at the Manx Hotel, with meetings and business sessions scheduled for Native Sons' Hall on Mason street.

With health agents engaged in a preliminary survey of the situation, California's new program of state air in rehabilitation of crippled children is under way and the actual work of removing the physical handicaps of needy youngsters is soon to begin. Outlining the humanitarian plan financed by the last legislature, Dr. Walter M. Dickie, director of the State Department of Public Health, announced establishment of clinics is planned as soon as the present survey reveals the number of children whose condition demands assistance.

The epidemic of infantile paralysis, which assumed alarming proportions throughout the state a few weeks ago, is on the decline, according to an announcement by the State Department of Public Health.

The new $350,000 building of the Shasta Union high school at Redding was occupied last week for the first time, with 435 students in attendance in charge of twenty teachers. J. S. Osborn, who has been principal for sixteen years, remains at the head of the institution. The old building, now abandoned, was erected twenty-five years ago.

SHE WENT FROM BAD TO WORSE

Down to 98 Pounds—Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."—Mrs. M. Riessinger, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

If some good fairy should appear, and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose? Wealth? Happiness?

Health? That's the best gift. Health is riches that gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness.

Make Him Happy

A fire which destroyed the house and garden of an aged cripple at Lead, South Dakota, brought into the life of the old man a lot of happiness. Boy scouts of Troop No. 22, who lived in the vicinity, adopted the old man and nicknamed him "Dad." They aided him in rebuilding his home, furnished him with food and clothing and cut him enough wood to keep him comfortable during the cold spells. Scouts from the troop were detailed to spend one night a week with the old man and the efforts of the troop have given him a new hold on life and happiness.

A BACHELOR'S FAMILY

While on a naval mission to Russia in 1920, Rear Admiral Newton A. McCully of the United States Navy ran across seven orphan children whose plight appealed to him. Then he did a most unusual thing. He brought them to American and adopted them all.

Being a bachelor with a large independent income, the Admiral satisfied the immigration authorities that his wards would be provided for and would not become public charges if admitted to the United States, although they were temoprarily held up at Ellis Island.

Since that time Admiral McCully has been devoted to his adopted children, the oldest of whom is now a student at the Staunton Military Academy in Virginia. He recently took the other six with him to Brazil, where he was temporarily on duty.

One might wonder whether he sometimes regrets having assumed the responsibility of conducting such a private orphanage. If so, the answer may be found in his own words: "My orphans are proving themselves an increasing delight."

And it is safe to say that there will not be a Communist or Bolshevik among them when they grow up.

VOTE SLACKERS INCREASING

California's "slackers of the ballot" are increasing by 32 per 1,000 of voting population at every presidential election, it appears from a remarkable study of voting behavior in this state just concluded by Professor Charles H. Titus of the University of California.

The study, conducted on the ground in twenty-two of the most representative cities of the state, show in cold facts and figures the amazing decline in the relative number of votes cast at each election, with the largest cities of the state listed as by far the worst offenders.

Professor Titus, who is a member of the Political Science Department of the University of California at Los Angeles, made no effort to determine the cause for this ominous political condition, leaving this to the psychologists. But the results of his investigations have led him to ask, in a paper soon to be published:

"Is democracy and universal suffrage compatible with large cities and growing urban regions?"

Professor Titus' study embraces the period from 1900 to 1924. It was conducted on the ground in each of the cities and towns included in his list, and he was extended every aid by these communities in checking up the vote from one election to another.

The outstanding fact developed by the study, he said, was that the larger the city the smaller the relative vote cast in proportion to voting population, with nearly all of them showing not only a steady but an amazing increase each election in the number of "vote slackers."

SAFETY IN TRAVEL

Safety in ocean travel and protection of overseas commerce in transit are to be featured at the Pacific Trade and Travel Exposition in the Civic Auditorium, San Francisco, November 11 to 20. One of the interesting exhibits in this category will be that of a typical marine radio installation exactly as on board ship. This particular display will be made by the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Company, operating under the Federal Telegraph System.

This exhibit will show complete radio equipment for protection of trade and travel on the high seas and providing reliable communication for the promotion of trade and travel and the convenience and enjoyment of passengers aboard ship. This is but another instance of the flavor of travel that will be injected in the big commercial and transportation show opening in San Francisco on Armistice day.

PAYING THE PRICE

It may be true that military men favor the maintenance of larger armies and navies than the average civilian deems necessary. But that they want war is not true. No class is more opposed to war than those who must inevitably take part in it when it comes. Particularly is this true of those who have experienced the horrors of war.

But military men who have seen the slaughter of untrained or partially trained troops are naturally believers in adequate measures of preparedness. As a rule they have little faith in the idea that war is a thing of the past.

At the same time they realize that public sentiment is against a large regular military establishment and content themselves with making the best preparations possible with the means Congress provides. Their attitude is well expressed by Major-General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, who recently said:

"We have never fought a war with trained and equipped troops, and we never shall do so. It is inconsistent with the form of our government and the psychology of our people to maintain adequate military preparedness. They would rather pay the price that has followed every war than spend a part of the amount in preserving peace."

IN EYES OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

Very few women assume an heroic aspect in the eyes of school children, and the most popular of all heroines is Jeanne d'Arc, according to results obtained by Professor L. A. Williams of the Department of Education at the University of California. Professor Williams some time ago made a survey of more than 3,000 boys and girls of high school age to determine what sort of men and women they considered worthy of being called "great."

A further analysis of 1,797 of these lists, made recently by Professor Williams, showed that women were omitted entirely from many lists, only ninety-nine women being mentioned, and of this number sixty-nine were named less than ten times, twenty-eight were named only once, and only nine were named over 100 times. Jeanne d'Arc was named more than 350 times.

The women who were named 100 times or more were: Florence Nightingale, Susan B. Anthony, Helen Keller, Clara Barton, Helen Wills, M. Schuman-Heink, M. Curie, Louise May Alcott and Mary Pickford.

THE POLITEST EDITOR

Young writers, and a lot of older ones, too, must frequently undergo the disappointment of having their offerings returned by editors who find them unsuited for publication.

Sometimes the editor will send back the manuscript accompanied by a note of regret over his inability to use the material; again he will merely enclose a printed rejection slip; and frequently he will return the offering without comment of any kind.

But the most polite editor on record, according to the Manchester Guardian, has been discovered in China. A translation of one of his rejection slips follows:

"We have read thy manuscript with delight. By the sacred ashes of our ancestors we swear that we never before have reveled in so enthralling a masterpiece. If we printed it, his majesty, the emperor, our high and mighty master, would ordain us to take it as a model, and never henceforth to print anything inferior to it. As it would be impossible to find its equal within 10,000 years, we are compelled, though shaken with sorrow at our action, to return the divine manuscript, and for doing so we ask of thee a thousand pardons."

THE VALUABLE HEN

The growing importance of the American hen is pointed out by Dr. John R. Mohler of the Department of Agriculture, who states that the poultry industry now reaches an annual value of more than a billion dollars.

American hens collectively lay about 760 eggs a second, or two billion dozen a year, and poultry ranks third among the various branches of the livestock industry, being exceeded only by dairying and swine.

More than one-third or the world's supply of poultry and eggs is produced in the United States. Even with the great amount of poultry raised, chickens and eggs are often scarce in many localities.

There appears to be further great possibilities for the expansion of the poultry industry, and an increasing number of farmers are finding it a profitable side line, particularly when pure-bred stock is raised with proper care.

Premiums paid on workmen's compensation insurance in California during the last twelve years total $148,680,244.61 and during the same period insurance carriers paid $80,037,361.93 to injured workers and their dependents, ot is announced by John A. McGilvray, director of the State department of industrial relations.

Another cut in federal income taxes will make the public feel so good that state legislature will think they can stand other jump in gasoline taxes.

SPREAD OF INDUSTRY

One of the significant facts of the present is the trend of industry away from the large centers and towards the smaller cities and towns. This trend seems likely to prove the salvation of the American farmer.

It is amply shown by reliable statistics that under the conditions which now prevail it is almost impossible for a strictly agricultural community to be prosperous. On the other hand, where industrial plants are found in the nearby towns, the farmer is afforded a better market for his produce and raw materials, with a consequent increase in his income.

The manufacturer also finds certain advantages in operating in smaller communities, such as cheaper rents, better living conditions for employees, and frequently more convenient transportation facilities, free from the congestion of the big cities.

With the wider distribution of electric power over an ever growing network of transmission lines reaching into almost every town and village, the number of desirable locations for factories is rapidly increasing. Wide-awake civic organizations are daily demonstrating the possibility of securing industrial plants for these small communities, and this movement is being encouraged by the electric companies and manufacturers themselves.

Decentralization of industry is being advocated by leading economists and industrial leaders everywhere with most beneficial results for all concerned, particularly the farmers in the vicinity of the new factory towns.

WORK AND PLAY

Farm people work too many hours, according to Dr. Searle Harris, one of the South's most prominent physicians, who declares that an eight-hour day is needed on the farm as well as elsewhere.

He thinks that the farmer gets into the habit of working long hours and consequently does not put forth as effective efforts as he would if he limited his daily period of labor. Dr. Harris says:

"Farmers ought to be encouraged to work strenuously eight hours a day and then take more rest and recreation, instead of working probably fifteen hours a day, as many of them do."

While most farmers would resent being told that they work "feebly," there is no doubt that when one knows he is going to stick on the job for fifteen hours a day, he will not exert himself as energetically as he would for a shorter period.

Vigorous work, relieved by a liberal amount of rest and recreation, seems to be a good formula for health and efficiency.

GOVERMENT BY LAW

The Constitution of the United States was drawn and perfected by the ablest body of men ever assembled to launch and establish a Goverment to be ruled by law.

Three departments were created; one makes the laws, another carries out the laws, and the third interprets the laws. Officials are chosen to enforce the laws.

The first article in the Constitution creates the Legislative Department; much the longest article, occupying more than one-third of the entire document.

Every department acts upon laws, administers laws and is governed and controlled by laws. Very few individual rights or property values have any existance outside of laws creating them.

Our goverment is essentially created to obviate and nullify the practice and effects of Communism, Bolshevism and anarchy in its operation.

THEY CAN'T SPELL

It is reported that among 298 young men and women who took a civil service examinations in New York recently all but three failed in spelling.

This is not surprising to those who have had occasion to observe the spelling of the average high school graduate, or even that of some college men and women.

Why our schools do not give more attention to spelling is an unsolved mystery. Hundreds of hours are devoted to subjects which a pupil never thinks of after leaving school, yet the art of spelling, which must be practiced every day of his life, is given scant consideration.

Perhaps it is thought that everyone should be permitted to develop originality. If so, the plan works well. Few show greater originality in any respect than in spelling.

And speaking of hair, the saddest story of the week concerns a bald gentleman who attempted to be facetious. He was at the apartment of a friend having a few fast ones before going home. His friend wears a toupee and for a joke he asked to borrow it to slip around the corner to his home wearing it. He did. His wife saw it, gave a gasp and snatching it from his head, tossed it into the open fire. The wig cost $200.

The government figures, and those of R. G. Dunn, analyzing the large number of failures, show: Lack of knowledge, of cost, lack of ability, lack of capital and poor credit judgment are responsible for about 95 per cent of all failures, and blame competition with only 2 per cent.

At the regular meeting of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, which was held in Masonic Hall, Daly City, last Wednesday evening, a number of candidates were initiated into the order by President Sylvia Fischer and her assisting officers. Many beautiful photographs were taken, which will be among some of the collections of this trip. During Miss Ver Linden's absence, her sister, Miss Fabian Ver Linden, assistant postmaster, took full charge of the office and conducted the business in a very excellent manner. Miss Ver Linden resumed her position on Monday.

WHAT MAKES A NATION STRONG?

What builds the nation's pillars high and its foundations strong?
What makes it might to defy the foes that round it throng?
It is not gold. Its kingdoms grand go down in battle's shock;
Its shafts are laid on sinking sand,
not on abiding rock.
Is it the sword? Ask the red dust
of empires away;
The blood has turned their stones
to rust, their glory to decay.
And is it pride? Ah, that bright crown has seemed to nations
sweet;
But God has struck its luster down
in ashes at His feet.
Not gold, but only men can make a people great and strong;
Men who, for truth and honor's sake, stand fast and suffer long.
Brave men who work while others
sleep, who dare while others fly—
They build a nation's pillars deep and lift them to the sky.

—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

CHILD LABOR HEARINGS

Walter G. Matthewson, chief of the Division of Labor Statistics and Law Enforcement of the Department of Industrial Relations, announced last Monday that public hearings on child labor will be held in San Francisco and Los Angeles to determine whether and to what extent, child labor should be prohibited in industries where minors come in close proximity to moving machinery, in construction work, and in the delivering of goods from motor vehicles.

These public hearings, scheduled for December 1, in San Francisco, and December 6 in Los Angeles, are the result of action taken by the latest session of the governor's cabinet at which Hon. John A. McGilvray, director of the Department of Industrial Relations, brought up and discussed the subject of accidents to minors and the apparent increase in child labor.

Mr. Matthewson said that this action is taken in accordance with the provisions of Statutes of California of 1919, Chapter 259, Page 415, and that the Division of Industrial Welfare, the State Board of Education and representatives of the employers and of labor will be invited to attend the hearings.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Rare Collection of Coins and Currency

One of the most valuable collections of old United States coins of every denomination is owned by H. DeLong, of No. 314 South Twelfth street, Philadelphia.

Mr. DeLong has been collecting old coins and paper currency since his childhood days. He is now sixty-one years old. In a gold frame he has a collection that he values at $1,000 The redeemable value of the framed currency in an American bank would be approximately $62.

One of the most unique coins in the collection is a brass, undated cent. On one side of the cent is engraved a bust of Washington. On the other side is inscribed "Success to the United States."

In the frame are other such rare coins as 25-cent, 50-cent, $1 and $3 gold pieces. Three, 5, 10, 15, 25 and 50-cent denominations of shinplasters are also included in the collection. Also half-cent coppers that date back to 1797.—Philadelphia Record.

And when we looked at her, even in the dimly lighted interior of the limousine, her appearance was different, too. The difference was as subtle as it was unmistakable. What we saw was another—radically new personality. It was as if the partition walls which had separated the personality of the stupidly respectable chambermaid from that of the untamed savage of the South seas were breaking down; as if these two widely sundered persons were merging into one. Neither Jane Perkins nor Fanenna could have uttered the word "murder" in just that accent of half-apprehended horror.

We were nearing our journey's end. Our road lay alongside the railroad line, and already we could see the one light in the Oak Ridge station window. There was no time to grapple with the new problem.

Then the chauffeur spoke to us through the little speaking tube which connected the chauffeur's seat with the interior of the limousine:

"There's a house on fire, up ahead there."

We all looked, and instantly saw a sudden lurid light, which was piling up the sky; saw it pierced the next moment by angry orange-colored flames.

"He's set fire to the house!" the doctor cried; and added, into the speaking tube, "Put on all the speed you can! We've no time to waste!"

The chauffeur obeyed, and within two minutes we were at the scene of the fire. The cold air of the winter night was already resonant with the shouts of the firemen and the excited exclamations of the crowd of half-dressed citizens who had gathered to render what assistance they could, and to enjoy the spectacle at the same time.

Mallory had already swung the door open and was half way out of the car, when an exclamation from the doctor stopped him.

"Hold on!" he cried. "This isn't the house. The Morgan house is two blocks further on down the street. Drive on!" he shouted to the chauffeur. "We mustn't waste a minute!"

Mallory sprang back to his seat, and once more the car lurched forward. The doctor held the door with one hand and leaned far out, scanning the road ahead with eager eyes.

"Drive slow," he cautioned the chauffeur.

Then he turned and spoke to us inside the car. "I've an idea that we better not drive right up to the house. There's no need of giving any more warning than necessary of the fact that we're coming. Look out ahead here, Phelps. Isn't that white gate half way down the next block the gate to the Morgan yard?"

I peered out over his shoulder. "Yes, I couldn't mistake that," said I.

"Good," said the doctor. "Stop here."

We four men clambered out of the car, the girl still fast asleep, still leaning back against the cushions in the corner, undisturbed by the confusion of our dismounting from the car.

"What shall we do with her?" I inquired. "I suppose she's safe enough where she is. She'll hardly wake up until you tell her to, will she?"

"No. The sleep is hypnotic," said the doctor. "She'll be safe enough here so far as that goes."

"It comes down to this," said Ashton. "If Wilkins is in the house, we sha'n't want the girl. She'd be in the way, for if he's cornered, he'll make a stiff fight. But if he's been to the house and done his work and already got away, and we're too late for him, as I fancy we are, then we'll have to use the girl again to track him. There's no other way."

"Then the thing to do," said the doctor, "is to make a reconnaissance. If he's already been here and searched the house for what he wanted and gone away, that fact will be easily apparent, and, as you say, it's the first thing to find out. Come, we've wasted time enough. The girl will be perfectly safe here."

"Hold on," said Ashton. "Why should we all go? We might defeat our purpose that way. Send Mallory. He's worth all the rest of us put together at fences and locks, and that sort of thing. He can find out in five minutes whether that house has been entered or not, and he won't attract one-twentieth part of the attention that four of us will."

The doctor nodded.

Without waiting for any further bidding, Mallory rushed off in the darkness, up the street toward the white gate. The rest of us stood just where we were, on the sidewalk, twenty paces or so from the automobile. We had nothing to do but wait for Mallory's return, and under such circumstances time, as a rule, drags heavily. But long before we expected his return, almost, it seemed, before he could have reached the house, we heard, coming toward us, the footsteps of a man running.

The three of us shrank back into the shadows, tensely alert for whatever this unexpected development might mean. But as the approaching figure emerged into the zone of light cut by the great gas lamps of our automobile, we saw that it was Mallory himself, Mallory hurrying toward us in an agony of haste, beckoning frantically, his eyes blazing with excitement.

We sprang forward to meet him.

"He's there!" he gasped. "Wilkins, himself! He's up in the study! There's a light, and the blinds are down; but I saw his shadow on the blind."

As we drew nearer the gate, our pace slackened cautiously. Ashton was a little in advance of the rest of us, and was the first to peer around the mass of shrubbery, which screened the house from the view of the street, except at the one point where the gate made an opening. I saw him stop and stiffen, and heard him catch his breath with a gasp.

"That's him," he whispered. "We've got him."

The next moment I saw it, too—the silhouette upon the blind of a figure in cap and ulster, bending studiously forward over the desk, in the chair in which Henry Morgan had sat when he met his death.

"Yes," I heard my chief say in a piercing whisper; "yes, we've got him—unless, unless, in some way, he's counted on making us think we had him—when we hadn't."

"Why do you think that?" Ashton demanded under his breath.

"It's—it's a little too obvious," said the doctor in uneasy hesitation. "Why should he court discovery in that way?

The Three of Us Shrank Back Into the Shadows.

Why should he be sitting there with his shadow on the blind, when he knows that half the town has been roused by this fire?"

Ashton started forward impatiently. "This is no time for theories," he muttered.

But the doctor laid a detaining hand upon his arm. "No," he said, "that's a valid question. If there's no trick about it, the man can't get away. If there is a trick, it's success will depend upon our doing the very thing that you propose to do—rushing ahead without stopping to think."

"Listen a minute," said Ashton, still in a whisper, but speaking with fierce impatience. "He must have set fire to that other house himself. He cannot have thought of a better scheme for drawing my men off the job. Once Wilkins saw them out of the house, he knew he had nothing to fear. He could make his search at leisure. And now he's found the things he wants, has found that map that he's been dreaming about for years, he's not thinking about his shadow nor the blind it falls on."

To me it seemed that the doctor's question had been fairly answered, and I moved forward, as Mallory and Ashton did. My chief hesitated an instant, then gave a nod of assent.

Mallory pulled open the gate. We all followed through it. Then I glanced up once more at the lighted window blind.

"Look!" I cried. "He's gone!"

One glance was all they needed. The silhouette of that figure had disappeared.

Ashton turned to Mallory and spoke so fast that the words trod on each other's heels.

"You stay outside," he commanded. "He may try the windows if he's cornered. You're the best man we've got on a chase. Don't hesitate to shoot! Come along, the rest of you!"

Together we rushed up the path, Ashton ahead and my chief and I just behind him. But, with all our haste, we ascended the steps and crossed the wooden veranda silently. The front door was not even latched. It swung back with a light push, and we were inside.

"I'll go to the kitchen," Ashton said, "and cover the back stairs, and work up from there. You two, between you, see that he doesn't get down the front stairs, and search the rooms on each floor before you go any higher."

Both of us nodded comprehendingly, and he darted away. I stayed in the hall, while the doctor searched the downstairs rooms which made up the front of the house.

In a minute or two my chief rejoined me in the hall. "He's not here," Ashton whispered. "Come, let's go upstairs. We'll draw this floor next, just as we did the other. You, Phelps, guard the head of the front stairs, I'll guard the back and the doctor can search the rooms."

Carefully as he searched, we drew blank again.

"All right," Ashton whispered. "He's still in the study, then. It's queer we don't hear him, though."

"Do you think he can have got out by one of the windows?" I questioned.

"Not with Mallory on the lookout outside. I told him to shoot, and he would. Come along! Follow me."

The study door was closed, but we could see the light shining out from under it. Ashton flung open the door. But from that silent room there never came a sound.

We waited a moment. Then, breathlessly and cautiously, we entered.

The room was empty.

For a moment we stared blankly into each other's faces. Then a grim, full-mouthed laugh from the doctor shattered the strained silence. He clutched Ashton's arm and pointed.

"Look! Look there!"

On the floor, beside the swivel chair, half under the desk, was a great caped-ulster and a hat, a bundle of bed clothes, a bolster and a small pillow.

"There!" cried the doctor; "there lies the shadow of our good friend Wilkins, but it looks as if his substance had escaped us."

"But the thing moved," I cried—"the shadow did, at any rate—moved and disappeared."

The doctor stooped and lifted up the empty sleeve of the big ulster. There was a string tied around the sleeve, a string that led up through an empty stove-pipe hole and out in the corridor. We went out to see what the other end of it was attached to, and found that it was made fast to a bell wire, in such a way as not, probably, to interfere with the ringing of the bell.

We gazed at the thing curiously and, for the moment, without comprehending. Then the doctor hit upon a solution, which we afterward found to be the true one.

It was simple. "Like all great ideas," said he. "The first thing Wilkins did was to make fast a string between the gate and the old-fashioned bell pull in the front doorway. In that way he assured himself of getting a warning when your detectives returned from the fire. It wouldn't allow him much leeway, but he undoubtedly calculated that it would be enough. When this house was in its prime this third floor room served, no doubt, as quarters for a servant, and it was natural that one of the bells should ring up here. The thought of the dummy had probably occurred to him in advance, and it was a good thought. His chance of escaping your two men, when they returned, would be vastly greater if they should rush into the house with no other idea than that an intruder was sitting in Henry Morgan's study, leaning over Henry Morgan's desk.

"But the notion of connecting the dummy with the bell wire, and balancing it so that the slightest pull would cause it to move toward the light, and then disappear, must have been the inspiration of the moment."

"Well, he's gone," said Ashton, "and he's probably got the map, though if you know where you left it, you'd better look and see."

I pulled open the drawer where we had placed it, and glanced inside. One glance was enough. The map was gone.

"He can't have gone very far," said Ashton; "that's a safe surmise; and as long as we've got that girl to track him with, we'll get him yet. Come, there's no use loitering here."

Great Not All From World's High Places

Who would have expected that Goliath's antagonist would emerge from the quiet pastures? "Genius hatches her offspring in strange places." Very humble homes are the birthplaces of mighty emancipations, once said the late Doctor Jowett.

There was a little farm at St. Ives, and the farmer lived a quiet and unsensational life. But the affairs of the nation became more and more confused and threatening. Monarchical power despoiled the people's liberties, and tyranny became rampant. And out from the little farm strode Oliver Cromwell, the ordained of God, to emancipate his country.

There was an obscure rectory at Epworth. The doings in the little rectory were just the quiet practices of simple homes in countless parts of England. And England was becoming brutalized, because its religious life was demoralized. The church was asleep, and the devil was wide awake! And forth from the humble rectory strode John Wesley, the appointed champion of the Lord, to enthuse, to purify, and to sweeten the life of the people.

On what quiet farm is the coming deliverer now labering? Who knows? —Exchange.

Put Leading Citizens' Faces on Monument

By a woman artist's prank, the faces of prominent living citizens of Helsingborg, Sweden, have been carved as astronomical figures on a monument unveiled there to the memory of the Seventeenth century astronomer, Tycho Brahe. When, at the command of the Swedish crown prince, the celestial globe, surmounting the fountain, was unveiled, the spectators recognized the architect, G. W. Widmark, as the Bear Driver; the editor of the local newspaper as Perseus; the chairman of the board of aldermen as the Wagoner, while the sculptor of the figures, Miss Astrid M. Aagesen, had carved a portrait of herself as the Virgin. Other notables of the town have been immortalized as the Centaur, Hercules, etc. Even the city physician, C. B. Hallengren, who had most vigorously opposed the erection of the monument, has his face among the stars, but instead of the expected caricature, the likeness is good.

"Bantus"

A Bantu is a member of one of the great family of Negroid tribes occupying Equatorial and southern Africa. These tribes include, as important divisions, the Kafirs, Damaras, Bechuanas, Swahilis and many tribes whose names begin with Aba-, Ama-, Ba-, Ma-, Wa-, variants of the Bantu plural personal prefix Aba-, as in Bantu, or Aba-ntu, itself a combination of this prefix with the syllable -ntu, a person.

House Made in Two Days

Two two-story houses were made in two days at Leicester, England, recently. They were of concrete, and at the end of the second day were ready for doors, windows and roof. After the foundations were laid, standard molds of wood were erected, and into these the concrete was poured. The molds were then removed, revealing the house in its final shape.

morning sun of gladness in their eyes and wanted them to travel happily with Him as children, by their Father's side, and not as slaves shuffling behind.

Through each succeeding century the child has been coming into his own, until today we measure the civilization of a nation by the question, "How does it treat its children?" Do you consider them a nuisance? Do you dislike them? Are you annoyed in their presence? Are you interested in their future, or do you scandalize them by your neglect or by bad example? The Hebrew King David, the man according to God's own heart, scandalized his children more by his unbridled excesses than his sublimest psalms; more by his sins than his saintliness. So we ought to take warning and learn the lesson of parental responsibility. Our Lord's strongest threat was a defense for children against scandal. He said that it were better that a millstone be tied about a man's neck and he be cast into the depths of the sea, rather than to scandalize one of His little children.

In the eyes of Christ we are all children, and often we are sore tried and injured by scandal and slander. Gossip goes on about the living and about the dead who are alive enough to be remembered. "Be thou pure as ice, chaste as snow—thou cans't not escape calumny," says Shakespeare.

Private scandal should never be received or willingly retailed. One of the most incomprehensible things of life is the license people take to censure in others the faults they are guilty of themselves. We usually find birds picking at the sweetest fruits, and often people who are best are those whose characters are assailed most bitterly. Scandal never does any harm until it is defended. Like poisonous weeds, it grows best in the dark, but it is a sickly thing and if left alone will die.

"Judge not that you may not be judged, for judgment is Mine," saith the Lord. Conscience is the sure guide man has to inform him whether he is worthy of love or hatred. We are what we are in the sight of God, and the less attention we give to the world's hisses or applause, the happier our lives will be and the more joy we can crowd into them.

You can afford to have a decent regard for public opinion, but you can never afford to to let yourself into the pathetic condition where what "they say" will keep you from doing what should be done. The judgment of men is fickle and deceptive. What "they say" today is not what "they said" yesterday or will say tomorrow.

The Saints were scandalized. St. John the Baptist came neither eating nor drinking, and yet the Publicans condemned him. They said of Christ, "Thou art a Samaritan and hast a devil." At Christians were hurled the words, "Your Master eats with sinners and adulterers." Christ paid little heed to the applause or condemnation of men. Today, His name is written in the lives and laws, the hearts and histories of nations the world over.

His gospel was one of Charity—"Be in charity with all men" was His plea. He saw how they fought for power and position; how they thought only of themselves. They lacked brotherliness, good fellowship and mutual confidence. They distrusted, suspected and considered every man either an enemy or a victim. They lacked the proper approach to God, for they knew not charity.

Christ told them about the wicked servant who, though forgiven his debt, throttled a fellow servant and had him tortured until his demand, "Pay what thou owest," was satisfied. Christ referred to no particular individual, but to mankind in general, and knew that many around him in their hearts could say of themselves, "Thou art the man."

His doctrines became deep-rooted. It changed the thought and viewpoint of men. The charity He preached became the crowning virtue that developed character and transformed a self-seeking, self-indulging people into a race who were willing to bear a little sorrow and suffering for one another.

They saw that their Master's life was pieced together by numberless persecutions, insulting outrages and severest torments. He bore them patiently and His fellow men took to heart the plea, "Learn of Me, for I am meek and humble of heart." He showed them the baseness of ingratitude and left a merciful provision imploring those who experienced generosity to "go and do in like manner."

Our country has its own set of opinions on which it acts with unvarying consistency. It has interests which it pursues with a keenness that never flags. It loves wealth and will do anything to attain it. It loves honor and will spend the finest powers of its soul to secure it. It loves pleasure and pursues it at a cost infinitely greater than it dreams. We have nearly all the gold in the world, a lot of indispensable raw material, a great industrial plant undamaged by the war.

Little wonder is it that less fortunate nations turn their eyes toward us, seeking our aid. We have heard their voices crying out in the wilderness of darkness and despair. Often they tell us that their complications, troubles and obligations are too great for them to meet. Without our aid they are helpless.

We heed their plea for assistance immediately. We turn our priceless assest to help them out of their despondencies and difficulties. We are a nation of charities and will not disappoint those who have placed in us their confidence and trust. We are a new country with new ideas, not tied up by age-old antagonisms; not poisioned by inherited hatreds; not entangled with the habits of a dead generations. We are a country compounded of more sympathy than any other single government, and there are enough representatives of each nation in these United States to secure a hearing and get fair treatment for their mother country.

We want, most of all, to live together in peace and friendship, but we also want our parent countries to live on the same basis, for our quarrels are reflected from across the sea. To the distressed we give all we can, lend all we dare. Our histories and lives are bound together, our happiness is their happiness. We pay what we owe in peace, patience, benignty and good will.

We are willing to stretch out a helping hand, bear another's burden and forgive injustices. We know that charity will bring its reward. By giving drink to the thirsty, food to the hungry and clothes to the ragged, by forgiving every man his debt, we are close to Christ, to the Christ who said, "As often as you do this to the least of My brethren, you do it to Me."

A great many critics of life are resentful because life doesn't come forward and offer them favors. They don't consider there's such a thing as working for favors and prizing them all the more because of the effort required.—John D. Barry.

Mrs. Adolph Bamberger of Somerville, Mass., held a complete hand of spades at bridge, scoring 852 points, her bid of four spades having been doubled and redoubled.

HONOR UNKNOWN

Armistice Day Ceremonies in the Capital of the Nation.

November 11, 1927.

Armistice day observance at Washington centers about the Unknown Soldier's tomb, where there is a gathering of those who always observe the day with floral tributes. Perhaps a dozen organizations make the pilgrimage to Arlington, among them the little interdenominational group of present and former army chaplains who conducted the religious services at the tomb when the Unknown was laid beneath the great granite slab that covers his resting place.

Army comrades of the war dead everywhere pay honors. Flags are at half-staff. Troops are ordered drawn up in silence to stand rigidly for a minute at 11 a. m., the hour of the armistice nine years ago. The national salute of 21 guns is decreed for all saluting posts.

Throughout the nation memorial services befitting the day mark gatherings in schools and churches and the momentary halt and silent tribute to the meaning of the day is interwoven even with prosaic business activities in many of the country's scattered industries.

ERECT STATUE TO HERO OF VERDUN

Soldier Who Died Gloriously Remembered.

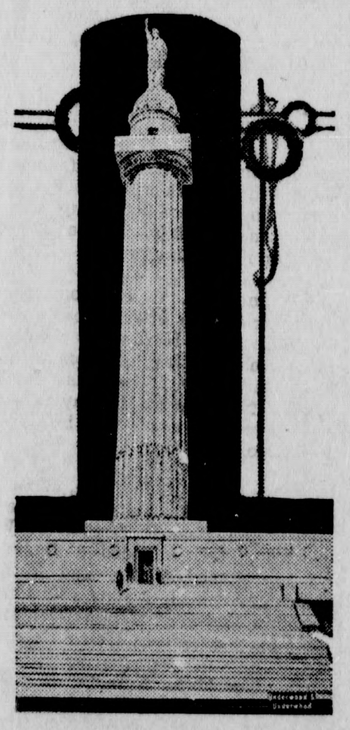
As the miners of the little town of Bully-les-Mines, France, emerge from the shafts each day they have before their eyes a story, carved in stone, of the deed of one of their number who carried on, even in death, during the "days of hell" at Verdun.

Fernand Marche was a runner attached to the French forces at Verdun, and when the Germans began a new assault he was sent with an urgent message to the colonel of a front-line regiment. On his way Marche was mortally wounded, but dragged himself to a crossroads, where some other runner might see his body.

Thus he died, holding aloft one hand in which the precious message was clutched. Another runner did come along, took the message from the stiffened fingers and delivered it. Then he went to Fernand's regiment and told how he died.

This moving gesture has been treasured in the hearts of the hero's fellow townsmen, who, with the help of the mining company, have erected a monument to Marche's memory. The monument represents him as he must have appeared to the second runner who found his body, his right arm thrust toward the sky, holding its message.

CONSECRATING THE ARGONNE



This huge shaft will recall to the minds of future generations the services of the Yankees in the Meuse-Argonne region of France. This monument, to be erected at Montfaucon, will be 165 feet high and the column 24 feet in diameter. John Russell Pope of New York designed the memorial.

FREEDOM FOR LABOR

The American Federation of Labor in session recently on the Pacific Coast, took a definate stand in favor or the five-day week.

This was done when the organization voted concurrence in the report of the executive council, which approved the five-day week as the new goal of organized labor.

The report also stated the belief that no country is fully free politically until its workers are fully free economically. The question remains whether full freedom is possible unless both employers and workers voluntarily agree in establishing the five-day week.

In Indiana politics the "ins" and the "outs" refer to those in and out of jail.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

By H. H.

VOLUME I FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1927 NUMBER 15

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

A man went into Cohen's Book Store and asked: "Have you Jerome K. Jerome's 'Who's Who and What's What?'"

Cohen: "No, but we have 'Who's He and Vats He Got,' by Bradstreet."

"ABERDEEN" and "American Block"—the coals that satisfy.

Then Dad Got Mad

"I say, dad, what keeps us from falling off the earth when we are upside down?" asked the young Democrat.

"Why, the law of gravity, of course."

"But how did folks stay on before the law was passed?"

Winter is not far away. How is your coal supply?

"Dead men tell no tales." That is why so many widows find it easy to marry again.

EVERYTHING in Builders' Hardware.

Father (arriving home): "What's your little brother crying for?"

Elsie: "Buddy's not crying for anything. He' had it."

"But don't you find that horseback riding gives one a headache?"

"No, madam. Just the reverse."

"Best" Locks—the simplest and most durable.

Norton: "Did the noise we made worry your folks when I brought you home last night?"

Pansy: "Oh, no! It was the silence."

Habits are bobs or sinkers. They hold you up or hold you down.

Even a smart man now and then saws into a nail; but only a fool saws through one.

A man is known by his friends, a business by its customers. Judge us by ours.

You can't know too much, but you can say too much," remarks "Silent Cal."

"STERLING" Wall Board, the wall board of satisfaction.
